[amz_nf] The problem seems to be that, in the process of trying to build the PC, the Retroshare installation for Windows somehow botched, making the Setup Process a complete disaster, and now the Setup is jammed up and can't continue. The Retroshare Installation worked fine, and I started Retroshare OK, but once I opened the Retroshare.exe file, it started processing Setup in the background, but never actually got to the final "Retroshare Setup Ready to Go" screen to validate and validate the copying of necessary files, etc. So this Setup isn't going through. This doesn't seem to be a Windows or Retroshare problem, but a Retroshare installation problem. I tried deleting the Setup Files, and using the "Uninstall" function in the Control
